GENERAL INFORMATION

Born: Ann James; Evanston, Illinois USA, November 9, 1951

Parents: Fred Keith James and Imogen Moore James

Siblings: Frank Keith James, Paul Alan James, Keith Bennion James, Susan James Niehans

1968 – 1974: Produced artwork with the signature of Ann James

1974-1989: Produced artwork with the signature of Ann James Zotz (married to Joseph C. "Tim" Zotz, Jr. 1974 – 1981)

1990 to present: Producing artwork with the signature of Ann James Massey (married to William Wayne Massey 1984 – 1994)

1994 to present: Living, working and traveling nine to eleven months a year in Paris, France; the other one to three months per year are in USA, mostly in El Paso, Texas

2004 to 2010: President and Honorary President of the United Kingdom Coloured Pencil Society, UK

1992 to 1994: Owner & Director of Massey Fine Arts, a gallery specializing in traditional realism in Santa Teresa, New Mexico, during which time she created and judged two national annual exhibitions: Realism Up Close: Small Works National Exhibition and Masters of Colored Pencil National Exhibition, the first major exhibition in the world dedicated solely to colored pencil

1974 to 1977: Owner & Director of The Montwood Gallery, El Paso, Texas, USA

INFORMATION ON THE TECHNIQUES

Despite the illusion of tight realism, Massey's work is drawn freehand and is not created through any mechanical or reproduction methods. In most cases, it would be impossible to take a photograph to recreate her mature final compositions exactly, as she intentionally distorts reality (and often perspective) to create a far more pleasing and natural composition as the Old Masters have done.

Medium of Wax Pencil: 1970 to present

Wax Pencil: collectively called colored pencil, though Massey usually only uses the black (Prismacolor) wax pencil.

The technique starts with gestural drawings (initial quick loose sketches) in graphite on tracing paper to decide the composition and proportions. After the chosen gestural composition is refined to a detailed line drawing, the tracing paper is turned over and the same lines are redrawn on the back. The paper is placed right side up and taped to the desired support (usually bristol paper plate finish) and rubbed with a blunt instrument thereby transferring her original line drawing to the final paper. After lifting the excess carbon so there is only a hint of the original drawing, she then gently puts forty layers plus of the permanent wax pencil, which neither erases nor smears easily and generally creates more detail and depth than the traditional mediums of graphite or charcoal. Due to this delicate layering method, miniatures may take several weeks to a month to finish, while larger works can be months, even years in the making.

Oil Painting in the Old Master's tradition: 1990 to present

Oil painting: The initial drawing is prepared the same as for her drawing technique plus utilizing an "Old Master's technique" as rediscovered by Jacques Maroger and as Massey absorbed from Ann Schuler during her short stay at the Schuler Academy of Fine Arts in Baltimore. The technique includes preparing sapele mahogany boards with three coats of rabbit skin glue and two coats of whiting; creating black oil by boiling cold pressed linseed oil with lead; mixing a medium from the black oil and a gum mastic solution created by dissolving gum mastic crystals in turpentine; grinding the paint from powdered pigment and the black oil; and then painting in layers. The first layer on the prepared wood is a thin toned wash of burnt umber and turpentine. The detailed line drawing (created in the same manner described in the first steps under the wax pencil drawing method) is then transferred to the board. The second layer is a burnt umber and turpentine value rendition of the drawn subject (the result looks akin to a sepia photograph), then usually three more layers of color, and the final layers of glazing and scumbling. No turpentine is used after the burnt umber value rendition layer. The medium is applied between each layer, but just in and before the area to be painted. This building-up process (which can take months to years to complete) allows each successive layer to affect the prior layers like panes of glass, creating luminosity and depth unmatched in more expedient techniques.
